

The Burden of History – a Roundtable Discussion with Tal Golan, Judi Gottschalk, and Gershon Shafir

In recent years, the experience of the so-called second generation has come under increasing scholarly scrutiny. What does it mean to be the child of parents who were persecuted and often singled out for extermination? In this roundtable discussion moderated by Joel Dimsdale, distinguished professor of psychiatry emeritus and author of Anatomy of Malice: The Enigma of the Nazi War Criminals, children of Holocaust survivors talk about their experience with transgenerational trauma. Tal Golan (Israel/USA), Judi Gottschalk (USA), and Gershon Shafir (Israel/USA) explore their personal experience as second-generation survivors and offer insight into their views on how the Holocaust has affected them and their family.

Tal Golan, professor of history

Judi Gottschalk, regional chairperson for the USHMM

Gershon Shafir, professor of sociology

Joel Dimsdale, professor of psychiatry
